WERE ASTONISHED

Prominent St. Paul Women Tour an Astorian Cannery.

COULD DISCOVER NO ODORS

Literary Editress of St. Paul Dispatch and Instructor in Teachers' Training School of Minnesota Capital City are Greatly Impressed by Astoria.

Minnie K. Bailey, literary editress of the St. Paul Dispatch, and Miss Frances Parker, of the St. Paul Teachers' Training school, were visitors in the city yesterday. Like all Easterners, these two, who, by the way, are great chums and have jaunted West doing everything from the Trail, at the Portland fair, to eating sound (referring, of course, to that great body of water up North) clams, labored under the impression that a tour of the Astoria canneries would necessitate subjecting their olfactory organs to the most severe of tests. With the writer the Misses Bailey and Parker visited one of the local canneries; the establishment was working its full force and afforded an opportunity to see the entire canning process. It would have been an injustice to the city, more particularly to the cannery management, to have overlooked the visitors' register so the writer led the ladies to a six by six office which houses the great volume, "How shall I write it?" queried Miss Baker, grasping a pen and with true professional instinct smearing her fingers with ink.

"In English," was suggested, the writer construing the interrogation to mean that Miss Bailey believed the register was for the perusal of the Chinese employed in the cannery. We entered the cannery proper where, were stacked until the piles veritably reached the rafters, thousands of cans of salmon.

"Heavens," sighed Miss Parker, really astonished.

"Oh, that's nothing. You should be here when we have a big run of fish," vouchsafed the writer, developing into a real Astorian. Picking up their skirts to protect them from a slightly damp floor, the ladies meandered through the enormous place displaying unusual interest in every phase of the process. They reached the tables where half a hundred sons of Confucius were busily engaged placing salmon into the cans.

"Why, the fish is raw!" exclaimed Miss Bailey. In this she was typically Eastern. In justice to Miss Parker it must be said she had an idea that the cooking was the tail end of the packing process.

"See how fast that Chinaman works," "eta'oin sh'tredlin" offered the Celestial in way of explanation, his lips parting and displaying a goodly expanse of gleaming ivory. Fascinated the ladies continued on their way, stopping here and there to study an intricate mechanism or to gaze in astonishment at the rapidity with which the Chinese soldered the air holes in the cans.

The retorts, where the salmon is cooked, were viewed, and that section of the cannery allotted to the labelling of the cans. On every hand something of interest was seen, the whole proved a revelation. The cleanliness in evidence in all parts of the cannery invited favorable comment, each saying the theory of filth as a part of the process was easily exploded.

Miss Bailey and Miss Parker were visibly impressed by Astoria, the environs, especially the hills back of the city with their wooded covering dotted here and there with spectre-like firs appealed to them greatly, and the modest federal building, so picturesquely located in the center of its well-kept park and surrounded by healthily looking sycamores.

The ladies left last evening for Seaside where they will remain until tonight returning to Portland. From the exposition city they will return to St. Paul via the Canadian Pacific railway.

CUT ON HEAD.

Will Walker Has Fall and Strikes Head On Lumber Pile.

Will Walker, employed as a salesman with Johnson Brothers, on Twelfth street, met with an accident yesterday which came near proving serious. He boarded a car in front of Madison's cigar store to deliver a package when some one attracted his attention. In attempting to step off the car his foot slipped and his head struck a pile of lumber in front of the Copeland building cutting two gashes in his head. He was taken to Dr. Furtan's office where two stitches were taken, and then removed to his home. The wounds are not serious and he will probably be out in a day or two.

STREET BIDS OPENED.

The committee on streets and public ways yesterday opened bids for the improvement of Third street between commercial and Duane streets. Two bids were offered, one from W. A. Goodin for $1,000 and one from Charles E. Johnson for $995.90. The estimate of the city surveyor was $9,07.00. The bids will be submitted to the common council at their meeting next Monday night with a recommendation that the contract be awarded to C. E. Johnson.

Bids were also opened for improvement of the alleyway east of the McGregor's mill as follows: Dill & Young, $1,840; L. Haggman, $1,935; W. A. Goodin, $1,842; Gust Mattson, $1,874; Birch & Jacobson, $1,896.50. The surveyor's estimate was $2,000. The contract will probably be awarded to Birch & Jacobson, the lowest bidders.

CANNERIES ARE BLOCKED.

Reports received in the city yesterday from agents of Astoria canneries, report the run of sockeye salmon the largest since 1901 and that all the canneries are blocked. Additional help has been sent over from the Columbia river to assist in packing the fish. The indications are that the pack on Puget sound will be the largest for several years.

RUN OVER BY TRUCK

Four-Year-Old Boy Meets Death in Union Town.

EINO CARLSON IS KILLED

Prael & Eigner Truck, While Passing
Along Bond Street, Is Boarded by
Carlson Boy. In Attempt to Jump
Off Is Run Over.

Eino Carlson, aged 4 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. U. O. Carlson, in attempting to jump off a truck belonging to Prael & Eigner which, while playing on West Bond street, Upper Astoria, he had boarded a few moments before, was run over, sustaining injuries from which he died half an hour later. The truck was driven by E. A. Tibbetts and was returning from the Tallant-Grant cannery where it has just hauled a load of salt. A number of children were playing in the street when the truck passed and the little Carlson fellow jumped on the rear end of the vehicle. He rode a short distance and in attempting to jump off, his foot slipped and he fell under the wheels, the truck going over his breast and crushing it. Mr. Tibbetts did not know that the boy had jumped on the truck, or that he had been run over until he returned with the second load.

The daughter of John Kamponen saw the accident and several men came to her assistance, picked up the boy and carried him to the Carlson residence. Medical assistance was summoned, but the boy died about half an hour after the accident. Coroner Polk was notified and went to make an investigation. He was satisfied that it was an unavoidable accident, in which the driver was not to blame and concluded not to hold an inquest. C. O. Carlson, the boy's father, is a fisherman and was not at home at the time when the accident happened.

All of the teamsters have been bothered considerably by young boys, and even by girls, jumping on trucks and usually exert considerable caution and many of the parents have been notified of the dangers, but it seems that the children have no other place to play so use the streets. Even the street car motormen are extremely cautious when going through the streets in Uniontown and on Franklin avenue, east of Twenty-third street, on account of children playing in the streets.

It is miraculous that more accidents do not occur, and while it is hard to blame the parents, the drivers are certainly not to blame. It was one of those distressing accidents that is liable to happen almost anytime, and which are only averted by drivers of wagons and trucks.

tainly not to blame. It was one of those distressing accidents that is liable to happen almost anytime, and which are only averted by drivers of wagons and trucks.

WEST SEASIDE'S MAYOR.

Dan J. Moore and Councilmen Will Govern New Incorporation.

At the last session of the legislature a bill was passed and approved incorporating the town of West Seaside, comprising the land lying on the west side of Necanicum river, with the exception of Hermosa Park. Dan J. Moore, was named in the bill as mayor, with five councilmen: A. G. Long, Paul Wessinger, J. E. Logan, E. M. Grimes and M. F. Henderson. The new council met last evening and organized. Several matters concerning the welfare of the town were discussed, chief among which was the question of sewerage.

The Seaside water supply runs through the new town, and all that is needed is a sewerage system. Mayor Moore appointed Councilmen Henderson, Long and Wessinger to make a survey and file estimates of the cost. It is the intention of the council to take up the work immediately and install a system and have it completed by the first of the year.
